Family Promise of Tulsa County Receives Grant from Clayton® and Family Promise National to Support Families in North Eastern Oklahoma

-- A Future Begins at Home grant program helps families facing homelessness remain in their homes and regain stability --

Tulsa, OK – Family Promise of Tulsa County was recently awarded a $20K grant from Clayton and Family Promise National that will ensure families in Tulsa County receive the support they need to remain safely housed.

The grant is a portion of the $1.3 million dollars that Clayton and Family Promise National are dispersing to the Family Promise network nationwide. The funds are a result of the recently announced partnership extension between Family Promise and Clayton. A Future Begins at Home, the program that arose from the collaboration focuses on helping families who face homelessness remain in their homes and quickly regain stability. Since its inception in 2019, A Future Begins at Home has catalyzed millions in additional funding resulting in more than 25,000 families served.

“There is a critical need for prevention and diversion services in the Tulsa area. This is a vital strategy to address homelessness and provide support to vulnerable families. By intervening early and providing targeted assistance, we can help families on the brink of homelessness maintain their housing stability and divert them from entering the cycle of homelessness altogether. Thank you Clayton for the opportunity to keep children in their homes.” –Tina Massey, ED

In addition to the grant program, Clayton has donated 16 homes to the Family Promise network since 2019. These homes are used primarily as transitional housing for families working with Family Promise. The homes allow families to stay together and regain stability as they work to find a new home.
